

ABSTRACT

A method of producing porous calcined granules of a non-combustible material, the method including calcining agglomerates of said non-combustible material and a combustible material to effect combustion of said combustible material, wherein energy generated by the combustion of the combustible material is at least partially utilised for said calcining.

4454550